Have Fun, Be Fun!™ | 1-800-370-2320

Are you having enough fun? Take the FUN TEST!

"Close to a dozen Stikfas inhabit the edge of my desk in a diorama form. About twice daily, someone will stop by to either rearrange the scene or the figures. If it comes out particularly 'good', it often turns into an office social."

"I bought a complete set of Where the Wild Things Are figures as a birthday gift for my sister last year. We both loved the book when we were growing up. Her nickname has been Max for years. It was a huge sentimental success."

"I always like to keep conversation starters around me. It can make a work environment more fun. Every time somebody sees my Simpsons interactive action figures and environments they smile and reminisce about the show. It can be a great ice-breaker."

1. How often are you in a good mood?

Fun improves your mood - studies show that a positive, happy attitude can impact every area of your life, including your health. Take care of yourself and enjoy life more by bringing more fun into it. You're never too old to reap benefits from fun and play like children do. Take care of friends and loved ones by sending them a unique gift that will surprise and excite them.

2. Is your work environment boring?

Work needs to be more fun! People who incorporate fun into their work routine are more productive, creative, use less sick time, and have better job satisfaction. Bring something fun to work that will liven up your environment and it will create an opportunity to have more fun with your co-workers. Many people find themselves the center of attention at work with these items.

3. Do you need to energize your creativity?

Having fun has been shown to develop and enhance creativity. Many people interact with our unique products in order to overcome creative blocks, reduce stress and to find a fresh outlook on their work.

4. Do you make "fun" a part of every day?

Surrounding yourself with amusing things is a way to make sure you enjoy the benefits of fun on a daily basis. The items Entertainment Earth sells are a great way to connect to all the excitement and fun associated with entertainment. Many fans find a continuing source of inspiration from their favorite fiction - stories that inspire us, thrill us, and fill us with out-of-control laughter.

5. Do others think of you as a fun person?

We are naturally drawn to people who can make us laugh and inspire us with a sense of fun. You will find yourself initiating fun for everyone with Entertainment Earth's products - they are natural conversation pieces and become a point of departure for breaking the ice, improving social interaction, and getting everyone else to crack up.

"I have tons of action figures, busts and statues on my desk -- Marvel Legends, Godzilla, Star Trek, Muppets, Simpsons, Warcraft, Diablo, McFarlane, various bits and pieces. It keeps the office setting from being sterile and reminds me of Ray Bradbury's work area. They help spark creativity, something I need in my work."

"I'm a sucker for Lord of the Rings collector items. I don't know what it is but it's the closest you can come to being a part of the terrific trilogy without having actually been in it."

Why You'll Never See Some of These Items Again!

The majority of products we sell are produced in limited runs and are only available during a short time period. There's no guarantee that you'll be able to purchase these items later.

Over 145 items from our Winter 2004 - 2005 catalog have already sold out. Don't miss your chance to purchase the items you really want. Order now!

A few years ago, McFarlane Toys licensed Maurice Sendak's classic children's book "Where the Wild Things Are" and produced a set of beautifully detailed figures. People looking to find a very special gift pre-ordered these highly anticipated figures immediately. Most figures were pre-ordered by the time we received our shipment, and by the end of that year these figures were gone. People asked about them long after they were sold out, but no more were available. Indeed, McFarlane Toys had limited their production run.

MY CLONE ARMY CAN BEAT UP YOUR CLONE ARMY!

Entertainment Earth Exclusive Troop Builder 4-Packs

By Adam Pawlus

While Hasbro has conducted a few Fan's Choice contests over the years, it's not uncommon for the toymakers to bow to collector demands, or to do so on someone else's behalf. For Entertainment Earth's next big exclusive, Entertainment Earth, Hasbro, and fan input meshed together to bring you what may well be the finest exclusive of the Attack of the Clones era of Star Wars toys.

The Toys

It's not often that a collector gets pretty much exactly what they want. The greatest Luke Skywalker in Bespin garb ever, for example, has an action feature that most collectors could live without. And the previous Clone Wars three-packs of Clone Troopers not only featured the soldiers in fixed poses, but were extremely hard to find in stores —and on top of that, there were five different versions of the three-pack! This time around, Hasbro produced an item that is about as perfect as you can get. Now, you can acquire the super-poseable Clone Trooper mold that was impossible to find back in 2003, and you can get it in the original white, or with damage marks, or colored in the four ranks of the Clone Trooper army.

This new set uses the 2003 mold and basically has made no changes to it—meaning that the figure has the same great construction with a ball-jointed head, multiple joints in the torso, arms, and legs, and even joints at the wrists and ankles. The figure was not designed to have foot holes for use with your favorite action figure stands, however. But unlike a lot of figures, these tend to stand well on their own, and can be posed to balance in more than one stance.

The Mysterious Legendary Green Clone Trooper Sergeant

One of the most exciting things about this set is the green Clone Trooper Sergeant. For the first time ever, this set aims to bring fans the Clone Trooper Sergeant in a green color more true to the film and less the Crayola Green that was included in the rarely seen Clone Wars three-packs—which, last I heard, was selling for about fifty bucks by itself.

The older Clone Wars three-pack saw very limited distribution and had the Clone Trooper Sergeant posed kneeling. Until now, this was the only way you could add an official Hasbro Star Wars Clone Trooper Sergeant to your Republic army ranks. So until this new item sells out, this is the cheapest way to obtain a green Clone Trooper, plus you get more Clones in the box, and it sports over a dozen joints.

The Box

Previous direct market troop builder packs from Hasbro, like the Endor Soldier Troop Builder set (see Figure 2 on page 4) or the Rebel Blockade Troop Builder Set (see Figure 3 on page 4) came in plain white boxes with a barcode and some black text explaining what they were. With individual figures sealed in clear plastic bags, these were about as generic as you could get. This time around, Hasbro created a great box modeled after the black and silver designs used for the super-popular Original Trilogy Collection.

The switch from a white box to this more lavish window packaging is a big change, and one sure way to annoy and impress fans all at once. How DARE Hasbro make an army builder with a package that's worthy of display alongside the finest Original Trilogy Collection items ever produced?

Hasbro has moved away from the great diorama-style packaging for the most part, but they brought it back for this set, which shows off a battle on some far-off world. And as an added bonus, the set includes a full-size poster of this illustration (see Figure 1 on page 4)! As such, this is a rare instance of a troop builder pack that has a box that you won't be itching to recycle as quickly as possible. Sure, you'll end up with a lot of spares if you order a case, but surely you have a bathroom to wallpaper, or a cubicle to dress up.

This is one of the most exciting exclusives to come down the pike in years, giving fans every Clone Trooper they could possibly want from Attack of the Clones in one big box (or several little ones.)

Army builders and collectors alike can find a lot to like here, as Entertainment Earth and Hasbro worked hard with Lucasfilm as well as fans to make these the most authentic clones ever!

Adam Pawlus has written about toys and/or Star Wars since 1995 for ToyFare Magazine, Star Wars Galaxy Collector, go figure! Magazine, and on the "information superhighway." You can currently read his after-hours toy ramblings online at GalacticHunter.com or at 16bit.com, or you can say hello to him at his day job where he soon expects to be promoted to "Fred XII."

MEET THE MAKERS: GENTLE GIANT

Gentle Giant Studios Bring a New Level of Art to Collectibles.

Gentle Giant Studios uses a wide range of high-tech scanning equipment that allows them to digitize just about anything imaginable, from a small prop - to a human body - to an entire movie set, which has resulted in the company becoming a "giant" presence within the world of action figures and collectibles.

Entertainment Earth's own Tony Santiago visited Gentle Giant Studios in Burbank, California to talk with Eric Lyga and Amanda Burns in the Sales and Marketing Department.

DARTH VADER 1:6 SCALE STATUE
Stands 14-inches tall and is an authentic, licensed collectible designed and developed by Gentle Giant Studios. Limited edition of 7,500.
GE7088 $199.99

Entertainment Earth: How did Gentle Giant get started?
Gentle Giant: About 10 years ago, Karl Meyer (CEO) realized he had a passion for sculpting. He started sculpting maquettes (miniature statues) in his garage for such companies as Disney and Warner Bros. Over time, he built up his studio, hired more people, and invested in hi-tech scanning machines because he saw the future potential in scanning.

EE: What makes your product different from other collectibles out there?
GG: I think the key is that we utilize a scanner. Anything that's technological or needs to be precise – to do that digitally is so much easier and takes much less time than having a sculptor do it. For example, the chest plate on the Biker Scout Mini Bust (sold out) is supposed to be symmetrical on both sides. For a sculptor to do this is very difficult and takes a lot of time.

A lot of people think that if you're using scanners, you're putting sculptors out of work and eliminating "the art". That's not true at all. Our sculptors love working with scanned material. Scanning gets them 70 – 80% of the way there. If we have three weeks to sculpt a project, and if they have to sculpt if from scratch, in clay, then go to wax, then do final details, the first two weeks of that are just clay getting a shape. They're then left with one week to do all the finishing touches and detail it out. But if we start from a scan, they have three weeks to do all those finishing touches and detail it out. That's why our pieces have detail that other companies don't.

EE: What lead to the transition from designing products for other companies to bringing products directly to market under the Gentle Giant name?
GG: It was a natural transition. When you design product for other companies, you have to let go of it after a certain point…and we didn't want to let go of it. We saw what other companies were doing with prototypes we put our heart and soul into, and the final product wasn't as good as it should've been. The same thing goes for the whole "scanning versus sculpting" debate that's been going on for a few years now. Some people would say that "scanning is crap", so we wanted to show them what scanning could really do. We also wanted to show people that scanning and sculpting work hand-in-hand.

EE: How do you go about deciding which licenses are right for you?
GG: We decide what to go after based on what's cool, what we have an attraction towards and what we think is going to be a good product. But our number one goal is a quality product…above profit. We do pieces where we go away thinking "this is not going to make money, but it's really cool, it would be great to have in the world…and everyone will know Gentle Giant did it."

EE: What is Gentle Giant's policy on limited editions? How do you choose the number?
GG: We've gotten to a point where we can do a pretty good job of gauging what the demand is going to be. It's a very fine and difficult line. If you don't make enough, you upset people because they can't get it. If you make too many, you upset people because it's everywhere.

EE: In 2004, Gentle Giant and Entertainment Earth collaborated on the Exclusive Clear Yoda Bust-Up (see Image 3 on page 18). How do you decide on exclusives and who to partner with?
GG: It's definitely a challenge deciding what exclusives to do, and which partners to work with. Entertainment Earth is a huge Star Wars partner of ours, and we love working with you guys. We only want to collaborate with companies that have integrity, take care of their customers, and take care of our name - instead of just flooding the market with our product.

EE: What can we look forward to from Gentle Giant in the near future?
GG: The most important thing to look forward to from Gentle Giant is the expansion beyond the world of Star Wars. This year we've been all about Star Wars, due to the success of the Clone Wars animated series, the Original Trilogy DVDs, and Episode III. We love Star Wars, and it will continue to be our flagship. But you're going to see expansion and growth of Gentle Giant into other licenses, such as Simpsons, Harry Potter, Corpse Bride, and Death Jr. With Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, we'll be delving into a new market with 12-inch articulated figures.

EE: Any final words for all the Gentle Giant fans out there?
GG: We love you man! We have some of the greatest fans in our collectors. We wouldn't and couldn't do this without all the people out there who spend their hard-earned money on our stuff. When we're deciding what to release, how much to release, even when we're deciding on our exclusives…we're always thinking of our fans.
